Homid Striders don't need them to, thus often grow up with rare and conflicting memories of their Garou parent, who visits rarely and often seems distracted even Red Talons: Bad time to be isolationist, cousins, then. The tribe has comparatively few metis, as the Striders Shadow Lords: They can't help treating you like are more likely to pair with other Garou than with their own, you're hiding something from them, and thus many metis cubs with Strider heritage grow up in the Silver Fangs: The world is widening and their other parent's tribe. The rest are usually carried and concealed vision is narrowing. Not a good combination on their parent's travels, taking what education and socialization. Stargazers: They understand the immensity of the tethon they can at the septs where they can be revealed, and world and the reality of the ground under your two feet. Becoming acclimated to the road at an early age. Still, the just not as good with the people living in between. Lupus Striders have comparable problems to face — it's not Uktena: Like us, they don't talk about half-oesay for a wolf-born to accept a life without pack or territory. what they know. Not sure I like the reasons. Wendigo: Some noble souls lie under all that. With the road in front of them and their ghosts behind them, bloody ice, the Silent Striders can't help but keep moving. They can stay in a place for a time, but if bound against their will, they become Tribal Totem: Owl, the wise hunter who flies silently by despondent and withdrawn, often falling into Harano. Even those night. Owl has a small, subtle brood of spirits to her name, who keep moving usually meet lonely deaths somewhere on their peculiar creatures such as the Darklings and the tiny skeletal journey — it's said that the aged or sorely wounded of the tribe mice called the Twice-Born walk into the Umbra on a final quest to find their ancestors, never to return. Whether they succeed or not, none can say. Character Creation: Silent Striders tend to be lean and hardy rather than thick and bulky. They pick up a wide variety. Appearance: No matter where they were born, Silent of Abilities in their travels. Resources is a discouraged Back-Striders are almost universally lean and fit from constant travel. ground: Ancestors is restricted, thanks to the Curse of Sutekh. Those with high Pure Breed have long, lean wolf forms that resemble the jackals of ancient Egyptian art, and Crinos forms. Initial Willpower: 3. Reminiscent of the Egyptian deity Anubis. Sleek black coats. Beginning Gifts: Heaven's Guidance, Sense Wyrm, and yellow eyes are also a mark of high Strider Pure Breed. Silence, Speed of Thought, Visions of Duat Kinfolk & Territory: Striders keep infrequent contact with their Kin, who are often dispossessed drifters themselves. They have no real territory of their own. "Trust me, I've seen things you don't want to know about. This, though — this you need to know." CHAPTLEERTTTWSOT:RITHDERGSAKOU 97 The Silver Fangs are first among the tribes, as they are quick to point out. Descendants of great heroes and monarchs, every one, the tribe of Falcon claims the role of leadership of the Garou Nation. They trace their bloodline back to the Progenitor Wolf, a genealogy of the noblest human blood and the finest wolf ancestors. Through the ages, they have been at the forefront of the war, the proudest and most magnificent Garou — and to hear the Silver Fangs tell it, that is still true. Other tribes have their doubts, though. Some charge that the Silver Fang's obsession with pure blood has brought them to inbreeding, and their once-clear minds have grown feeble and clouded through the generations. Weak kings demand respect for the deeds of their ancestors, not their own. Mad leaders care more for the details of their courtly traditions than for the war against the Wyrm. Far too many fall to Harano for them to be a healthy tribe. Both viewpoints have some truth to them. The Silver Fangs do indeed descend from great heroes, and they have also suffered from their preference for aristocratic Kinfolk over healthy and intelligent Kin. Many are as bad as their critics claim, but some still shine with the light of old heroism. In some ways, they are exactly the exemplars of the Garou they claim to be — the strengths and the afflictions of the Garou Nation are reflected in the story of the Silver Fangs. From their First Change, the Silver Fangs learn that they are meant to rule — not that it is their destiny, or their right, but their purpose. The best of them interpret this mandate as a form of noblesse oblige: that they must lead by example in peace and in war. The worst seize upon it as justification for tyranny. Their aristocratic Kinfolk families raise their children with a sense of being "above the rest." Their lupus Kin, of course, have no real sense of nobility per se. But the Fangs carefully protect them with the fullness of their resources, so many Silver Fang lupus still enjoy a more privileged youth than 98 WEREWOLF THE APOCALYPSE 20TH ANNIVERSARY EDITION
